

Mental Health: Mind Matters

Special exhibition at the Science Center of Iowa | February 5 - April 28, 2019

Good mental health is an important aspect of everyone's life. Like physical illness, mental illness is not a "choice" or a personal flaw but a medical condition that requires care. In 2014, the National Institute of Mental Health reported that there were an estimated 43.6 million adults aged 18 or older in the United States with a mental illness in the previous year – 18.1% of all U.S. adults.

Much as the traveling exhibition RACE: Are We So Different? created a safe place for conversations around race and racism, Mental Health: Mind Matters will create a safe space for important conversations about mental illness. Misconceptions and stigma lead to prejudice and discrimination. This exhibition and related programming can help make it OK to talk about mental health. Mental illness touches all of our lives in some way, making Mental Health: Mind Matters an important resource.

Mental Health: Mind Matters provides the opportunity for your organization or group to engage in meaningful discussion on mental health and the diversity and inclusion in your organization and in our community.

We acknowledge that mental health can sometimes be an uncomfortable topic – but science can help us understand even the most complex issues. Don't miss this opportunity to engage your organization in this important conversation.
